ADMINISTRATION

Delta Variant
The latest surge in Covid-19 cases generated by the Delta variant is throwing a wrench in our plans to return to normal library operations. This latest twist in the Covid-19 pandemic is one more on a long list—and, unfortunately, it may well not be the last. In light of this reality, I want to share with you several ways the library district is responding in the current environment.

Continue to prioritize employees’ well-being
As of the end of August, nearly 86% of our library staff have been vaccinated. I am most pleased library staff have taken advantage of the incentives to be vaccinated. Vaccinated library staff are at a far lower risk of contracting Covid-19, including the Delta variant, and are less likely to suffer serious illness if they do. Still, recent data has drawn attention to rare breakthrough cases, and the risk to unvaccinated people and those with compromised immune systems remains high.

Meanwhile, many employees continue to have new or enhanced challenges in areas such as childcare, elder care, and mental health.

Returning to normal operations in our current environment without consideration to these can have profoundly negative effects on morale and retention. We continue to prioritize employee well-being relating to minimizing Covid-19 infections in the workplace. Additionally, we continue to evaluate ways we can help employees through these challenges by providing flexibility and support where needed.

Adaptability and Communication
Library district staff desire clear direction, and library leadership tries to provide this. As we share our decisions regarding the pandemic, such as mandates and recommendations from the State of Colorado and the Larimer County Department of Health and Environment, it is important to be upfront and honest about what we know and what we do not know. It is also important to have contingencies in place for when we need to change course. Using our Pandemic Response Plan as our guide, we have learned to adapt to changes quickly. In example, we went from everyone required to wear a mask ages two and older, to masks for those 11 and older to no masks required for anyone to again requiring masking for library staff only.

The challenge, though, with being adaptable is that it can increase anxiety among library staff, who have already been through a tremendous amount of change during the pandemic. Library leadership strives to recognize this anxiety and communicate in ways that help diffuse or reduce it. For library leadership, it can be especially challenging when State/County mandates are enacted or dropped, with little or no lead-time for communicating with library staff. I hear often from library staff who wish we would just give some time to adjust. They are absolutely correct and I understand their frustrations. Our new Staff Cache is helping by keeping current and relevant communications easily accessible to all library district staff members.

Continuing remote work and improving organizational culture
The number of library staff shifting to remote work was new to most of us. This shift demonstrated the viability of remote work for many of our positions. There have been concerns expressed by experts about the impacts of productivity, innovation and institutional culture. While I hear these concerns, I look back on the past 18 months how our library staff figured out how to serve our customers in new and thoughtful ways, build relationships and solve problems while working remotely. Insisting on bringing people back to their workspace just so they can be supervised more closely has a counter-productive effect by displaying a lack of trust. Letting library teams decide together what works best for them and the library district will help build a culture of trust and mutual accountability.

COMMUNICATIONS

By Katie Auman

July and August Highlights:

• Launched the “Next Chapter” campaign designed to welcome occasional and recently inactive cardholders back to begin their own “next chapter” at the library whether it is going back to school, getting back to the office, looking for a job, pursuing a new hobby, etc. The campaign will include a mix of targeted direct mail, email marketing, digital ads, and social media.

Social media image samples:

• Refreshed the District’s community-led programming” model and application process to leverage the incredible talent, skills, and leadership found within our region. An overview of community-led programming at the library, along with the online application, is available on the website.

• Earned media coverage in July and August included

Ludy Rueda’s Report

- During August, I have been planning big fall programs: The Celebration of the 10th anniversary of the Rafael Lopez Community Mural and the IMAGINANTES program, and Dia de Muertos programs and community celebration. I’m very grateful of our Communications Department whose support has been fundamental in the planning of those programs.

- The Commissioner’s Office invited our District to be part of a bilingual Storytime with Commissioners Kristen Stephens and John Kefalas during Larimer County Farmers Market. It was a great opportunity to engage with our representatives and our community and to create new connections.

- As we get ready for a new season, a thoroughly revision of programs and events offered by our department was done in order to support the efforts of preparing the new budget. I also helped preparing the Children’s Programming team’s budget.

- Our partnership with Larimer County Sentencing Department has allowed us to provide “Welcome back to school” kits to many children in underserved communities. These kits consist in a beautifully arrange bund of notebooks and art supplies. Children and adults have been very appreciative of this special gift from the Library to our patrons. A shout-out to Rob Stansbury who has helped transporting the kits.

From Irish Elementary School

- “Muchísimas gracias por los hermosos kits que nos trajiste. A nuestras maestras y alumnos les encantó. Estamos agradeciendo por nuestra maravillosa biblioteca. (Thank you so much for the beautiful kits you brought us. Our teachers and students loved them! We are grateful for our marvelous Library)”

- Storytime’s schedule has been completed. 10 different schools and early childhood centers will get monthly visits this school year starting in September.

- I have been recruiting teens for the Library’s Teen Council meeting happening next month. These teens have been part of the IMAGINANTES program and have shown interest on being part of the teen program planning and teen book collection development.

COUNCIL TREE LIBRARY

Summer Reading wrap-up: This year’s summer reading challenge, Tails and Tales, ended on August 15. Teen Services Librarian Jenny Thurman reported 552 teens registered for SRC this year. 319 logged that they read 10 hours, a 58% completion rate. 466 teens logged 10 hours of reading in 2020; 1110 in 2019. 2,834 children registered for the program this year, attended dozens of outdoor and virtual programs and earned hundreds of prize books (final tally TBD). 37 children, 21 teens and 10 adults picked up grand prizes from CTL during August.
Shelving reduction and reconfiguration project completed: In order to provide an improved customer experience, Collections Manager Tova Aragon, former CTL Circulation Supervisor Angela James, current CTL Circulation Supervisor Xochil Arellano and I collaborated on a months-long plan to reduce and reconfigure 13 stacks in the adult print area of CTL. Goals included: improve access to the hold shelf, increase space for traffic flow, provide better browsing for customers and improve sightlines. To achieve these goals, 13 six-shelf columns were removed, collections were shifted, reduced, redistributed and relocated. The hold shelf was moved to a highly visible, easily accessed location steps from the entryway. The extra space, visibility and easy access has been well-received by customers and staff.

660 free Back to School kits given away in August: Clients of Larimer County Alternative Sentencing/Useful Public Service assembled the kits, containing markers, safe scissors, notebooks, glue and crayons, bundled them with colorful ribbons and a tag saying, “Happy Back to School!” Amy Holzworth partnered with the agency to distribute the kits at no cost to the Library. Children and parents were charmed!

More August children’s services in highlights from Amy Holzworth, CTL Children’s Librarian:
Storytime at the Gardens on Spring Creek, August 11: Third of three summer storytimes. 109 people enjoyed dancing, singing, spelling, and stories including 63 bilingual attendees associated with Poudre School District Early Childhood Education.
Storytime with County Commissioner Jody Shadduck-McNally at the Farmer’s Market August 28.

Circulation Supervisor Xochil Arellano reports she has been focused on maintaining efficient and service-demanded levels of staffing in August. She managed turnover and absence due to COVID-related issues among a handful of staff again this month. Xochil hired two new CERs in August and coordinated a half-day ACS training. Xochil also served on the Learning Organization Team to present virtual Staff Day on the morning of August 13.

OLD TOWN LIBRARY

By Eileen McCluskey

Programs and Services

- Monday morning outdoor programs at OTL were a hit with families and included drum circles, talented border collies, music, stories and movement.
- Deidre’s Staying Active for Older Adults had adults moving under the Library Park canopy.
- Meg collaborated with the City on additional Know Your City programs, including one that gave people a walking tour of Old Town Art in Public Places and another walking tour at Kestrel Fields Natural Area. Meg also continues planning for Book Fest.
- The library’s internal Sharepoint site, Staff Cache, continues to grow as departments deploy their content onto the site. Kristen and Kindra continue their work on the site buildout and staff awareness/training.
- The Book Bike has been out and about all summer, with trips to the Boys and Girls Club, City Natural Areas, Northside Aztlan, Foothills Activity Center and more.

Ongoing projects in support of the strategic plan

- Larimer County Digital Inclusion project has been named Digital Roots. PRPLD is now a Northstar Digital site and plans continue to develop for Digital Inclusion week starting Oct. 4. EWD is now offering drop-in career help at OTL twice a month. Kristen investigated PCs for People and worked with SA to revamp the library’s computer services web page.
- OTL Remodel – We are under contract for furniture and GC services. StudioTrope has submitted a permit application with the City, estimated at 6 weeks out. WSI has ordered new furniture for the OTL computer lab as well as the furniture for the remodel. OTL’s roof replacement is scheduled for October.

- ESL Mentoring service continues to grow and build community, along with supporting English language learning. Anne and Eileen hosted an ESL learning pairs social at Spring Canyon Park, with about 50 participants from the program. Anne has also expanded the program to including 1:1 tutoring for community members with a scheduled Citizenship exam.
- Eileen toured HPLD’s MOVE department with PRPLD’s Outreach team and Ken in order to learn more about their outreach vehicles. We learned they were SWEET!
- Eileen met with representatives from the City regarding supporting a Spanish-language Business and Entrepreneur Center at OTL.
- Holly and her team worked with Facilities and Collections to move stacks and open up more floor space for OTL customers. The changes are subtle but impactful.

Staffing – OTL said a fond farewell to Ian H., who accepted a library manager position in the Midwest.
